Vancouver weekend

On January 12th 2008, Alan and Shirley drove from Seattle to Vancouver for a weekend adventure. First on the itinerary was a visit to the Museum of Anthropology at UBC. Then it was off to dinner at the Rain City Grill. Following a stroll through Gas Town it was time to turn-in in our room at the nearby Victoria Hotel.

In the morning they visited Steve and Rachel and 2 month old Naomi. The view of the city from the nearby park was breath taking. By this time they were starting to get hungry, so they headed to the Granville Island Public Markets where the food was a feast for the eyes as well as the taste buds and the craft shops were full of interesting and beautiful items. Once they had eaten their fill and leisurely strolled about the area, they drove to Stanley Park for a brisk walk around the peninsula.

A visit to the Aquarium was essential as they discovered wonderful animals of the Northwest Pacific and beyond. They fell in love with the incredibly cute otters, just as millions of other visitors before them had done. The day ended with a delightful vegetarian dinner at Naam and the long drive back across the border and "home" to Seattle.
